Alexander Wang makes his bold return to the runway, and this SS 2025 collection shows he has no intention of slowing down.

Alexander Wang marked a milestone this New York Fashion Week with his SS 2026 runway show, celebrating the brand's 20th anniversary with a collection looking through the lens of the alpha female.

Wang shared this season was “dedicated to the multiple layers of the alpha female”, he explained his team “wanted to make the silhouette concise, the hemline sharp, and explore every aspect of the wardrobe through that lens.”

The collection features sharp architectural tailoring with soft flow and ease, bringing themes of versatility and female power. Accompanied with furs, sleek silhouettes, and futuristic bold eyeliner, this collection reimagines his signature downtown sensibility. Wang had emphasized the themes for this collection stating “our femininity is defined by its sharp edges”, focusing on garments that feel both commanding and expressive.

Wang reflects on his creative intentions, previously speaking about approaching this new chapter in his work feeling transparent and personal: “Today, I feel grounded in who I am and crystal clear about the kind of clothes I want to create. For the next decade my hope is simple, to experience more joy, greater alignment and the freedom to design without the weight of outside opinions.”

This Spring Summer collection marks a confident come back for Alexander Wang, balancing his brand's signature heritage with a more modern direction.

The collection is set for global launch at Alexander Wang retail locations and select partner retailers.
